this book reappraises the british and american experience in curriculum studies the curious way in which it has been dominated by certain ideas and introduces the reader to alternative ways of perceiving defining and approaching its problems it provides a radical critique of the whole area presenting both marxist and phenomenological perspectives on the current dilemmas that teachers face the book argues that in order to understand the problems teachers face in coping with the curriculum we must look at the situation from the point of view of the individual rather than prescribing a norm for all teachers the dynamic relationship between the individual and the collective and the teacher and the state is one of the fundamental issues in solving the present problems in curriculum studies the book focuses on this central problem and suggests a variety of ways in which new solutions may be found

first published in 1987 the central concept of the book is that of democratic evaluation one of the most influential ideas in the development of education practice in this country since professional evaluation emerged in the 1960s the question explored through an examination of the theory and practice of democratic evaluation is whether it is possible to both posit and practice an approach to evaluation that provides an effective curb on the derivatisation and centralisation of information for educational decision making the book documents the emergence of politically conscious evaluation in this country and through two detailed cases explores the strengths and weaknesses of democratic theory in practice issues concerning the rights obligations and freedoms of evaluators in the conduct and dissemination of evaluations are discussed
